

4,760 Palgrave Macmillan titles included in Thomson Reuters Book Citation Index at launch

Last month Thomson Reuters announced the launch of the Web of Science Book Citation Index, a new resource covering 25,000 books in the sciences, social sciences, and arts and humanities. Palgrave Macmillan is delighted to report that 4,760 of its scholarly books have been included at launch.

Sam Burridge, Publishing Director at Palgrave Macmillan, says, 'We are very pleased to be the largest contributor of content in the humanities and the social sciences. We believe the Book Citation Index will play a key part in showing the crucial importance of publishing original scholarly research in monograph format.'

About the Book Citation Index

Content for the Book Citation Index is comprised of scholarly books, both electronic and print, that present fully referenced articles of original research or reviews of the literature, and has been carefully selected based on well-defined criteria to offer the most significant literature available. The index consists of 25,000 books, dating back to 2005. Coverage is expected to rise to 30,000 books by the end of 2011, with 10,000 new books added each year.
